This paper will always fight for progress and reform, it will not knowingly tolerate injustice or corruption and will always fight demagogues of all parties; it will oppose privileged classes and public plunderers; it will never lack sympathy with the poor; it will always remain devoted to the public welfare and will never be satisfied with merely printing news; it will always be drastically independent and will never be afraid to attack wrong, whether committed by the rich or the poor.

TELEGRAM LOSES ITS EDITOR.

Judge C. C. Goodwin has resigned as editor of the Salt Lake Telegram, to devote his time to Goodwin's Weekly. The Telegram, in parting company, pays a nice tribute to Judge Goodwin, of which the following is an excerpt:

"While Judge Goodwin was born in the East, his ambition turned early in his life to the vast and undeveloped empire bordered by the majestic Rockies and the mighty Pacific. He saw the West and loved her. He has been her stalwart champion ever since. As school teacher, miner, jurist and editor he labored lovingly in the development and advancement of California and Nevada. His literary genius shone brilliantly with that of Mark Twain, Dan De Quille, Joseph T. Goodman and others whose songs have charmed the world."

"Early in the year 1880 Judge Goodwin saw the vision of Utah's coming greatness and cast his lot with her. For a short time he engaged in mining, but so blessed a pen as his was not to be idle, and in May of that year he put it to vigorous use in the columns of the Tribune. For twenty-one years he was its editor in chief. In Utah's most trying days he was fighting unflinchingly and tirelessly for her interests. He has seen the coming of peace and co-operation that are leading his adopted state into the ranks of the most prosperous commonwealths."

FOREST SERVICE HAS AIDED SHEPHERDS.

A. F. Potter, associate forester, in his address before the National Woolgrowers in session in Salt Lake, brought out many interesting points on government control of the national forest, over a period of eight years.

Mr. Potter first pointed out that, when government supervision began, the national forests were badly overgrazed, that range wars were being fought and ranges destroyed. Grazing periods were established, governed by the time in which forage plants matured. Ranges were divided by fences to separate horses and cattle. Pastures were established. Water facilities were developed. Experiments are being made on reseeding the ranges. On reseeding, the forester said:

"Our investigations have established beyond doubt that natural reseeding can be accomplished best by a rotation system of grazing, based upon the simple principles that after the vegetation has matured its seed, approximately from August 15 to September 15, grazing aids in scattering and planting seed. A report recently received from the Supervisor of the Hayden forest on the experiment started there in 1910 with one acre absolutely protected year-long against grazing, 19 acres protected until after seed maturity and then grazed, and outside range unprotected, shows that the vegetation on the 19-acre tract grazed each fall is approximately 50 per cent better than the totally protected area and probably 200 per cent better than the range without protection. This means that the ranges can be improved faster in use than they can be in idleness. This principle is being rapidly adopted on many of the other forests and is securing excellent results. In my estimation this system offers great encouragement in range improvement, for the reason that there is almost no waste of forage and consequently the stockmen suffer no loss in adopting it. It gives better results than total exclusion of the stock and it prevents the accumulation of coarse, unusable forage, and other inflammable material which is a menace to the forests. This principle can be worked into the management of every piece of range on national forests and will be fundamental as long as we have range management."

A new system in handling sheep has been worked out by what is known as the "bedding out system," which is described as simply open, quiet herding during the day and bedding the sheep where night overtakes them. Of this method, Mr. Potter says:

"At the present time there are a number of forests where almost without exception the sheep are never returned to one bed ground more than one or two nights, and on nearly all the grazing forests, at least a part of the sheepmen have been persuaded to adopt this method, and the result invariably is an average increase of about 5 pounds in the weight of the lambs, and I should say an increase of 10 to 25 per cent in carrying capacity of the ranges. An increase of 5 pounds per lamb for 5,000,000 lambs would mean 25,000,000 pounds added to the sheepmen's salable product and the country's meat supply."

WINTER SPORTS IN OUR MOUNTAINS

Rev. F. G. Brainerd is a lover of mountain climbing and since his residence in Ogden he has tramped over more miles of mountain scenery than any one person in the community, and, therefore, he must be accepted as somewhat of an authority on the deep gorges and high ridges to the east of Ogden. He says that the Wasatch range—particularly the mountain heights out of Ogden and Taylor canyons—is more majestic and beautifully inspiring in winter than in summer.

On snowshoes Mr. Brainerd and other Ogdenites enjoy long journeys into the snow-covered hills, where the "beautiful" drifts 20 to 30 feet deep and where great overhanging rims form on the divides. They look forward to these winter outings with as much pleasure as does the stay-at-home welcome a spring day in the canyon.

One day last week the mountain-climbers equipped themselves with skis and came down from Malan's Heights with the wind. That is sport and just such winter sport as should be more widely participated in. There are places in the east where, in order to afford winter pastimes, the people build toboggan slides, but here, where nature has established mighty inclines and where snow falls to great depth, no one other than a very few, seem to realize the joy in store for those who will get out in the hills. Our winter scenes, in canyon and on mountain top, and the possibilities of our winter sports, should be one of the advertised features of Ogden.

GROWTH OF BRICK INDUSTRY IN OGDEN

First one industry and then another adds to Ogden industrial importance. Last week the Standard recorded the coming of the American Can company with a factory to employ 125 or more workers; yesterday the Ogden Press Brick company closed down in order to place machinery which will double the capacity of the yards at Harrisville and give employment to 80 to 100 men.

The Harrisville plant is now one of the largest in the state, but within two months the kilns will be turning out bricks at the rate of 32,000,000 a year and take rank as the largest in the intermountain country.

Hollow bricks, with two openings, 1 1/4 inches square through each brick lengthwise, are to be made, also hollow tiles and vitrified bricks.

Nearly all the output of the plant is shipped to the north and the making of hollow bricks will play an important part in cutting down freight charges on each thousand.

In the shipping season an average of four cars of bricks a day leave the Harrisville yards for outside points.

The growth of the Harrisville plant illustrates Ogden's forward movement. Candy factory, packing plant, overall factory, machine shops, pickling works, all are increasing in size, spreading out, employing more people and building up a highly prosperous city.

UTAH BANKERS ON THE CURRENCY BILL

There is a big change of front among the bankers of Salt Lake in their comments on the currency law. Before the measure passed congress they were, with one or two exceptions, uncompromisingly opposed to the bill. Yesterday a representative of the Salt Lake papers interviewed many of the leading bankers of that city and obtained the following statements:

W. F. Adams, vice president National City bank—"I think that the bill that it will work out all right eventually. It may require some changes as conditions develop. Some features of it undoubtedly are questionable. Personally I would have preferred a central bank."

M. Walker, president Walker Brothers bank—"This new currency bill means that it will be ultimately a central bank proposition. I think, however, it will take time for condi-

THE WORLD'S MARKET NEWS

WALL STREET.

New York, N. Y., Jan. 17.—The market closed easy. Profit-taking continued today and there was renewed bear selling, but recessions were small and trading dull. The aggressive marking up of low-priced shares, which continued yesterday after the advance in the leaders was checked, was not attempted today, and the market was flat. Canadian Pacific, which rose two points, was the only prominent issue to oppose the downward trend. The announcement that the Minneapolis

IN SEEKING DIVORCE ACTRESS ACCUSES PREACHER-HUSBAND OF INDISCRETIONS

Adele Blood.

New York, Jan. 17.—(Special.)—Mrs. Adele Blood, known on the stage as Adele Blood, has entered divorce proceedings against Edward Davis, actor, who before he gave up the pastorate of the Central Christian church in Oakland, Cal., to elevate the stage, was called the "Talmage of the West" by Josquin Miller, the poet. Mrs. Davis names as co-respondent Mrs. Louise Power Bryant, known on the stage as Jule Power, and at present leading woman for Mr. Davis in "The Kingdom of Destiny."

The Rev. Cader Russell Davis was a leading pastor in California a decade ago when he married Adele Blood, soprano in his church. Soon afterward she went on the stage and he followed her example in 1906, appearing with marked success in heroic roles.

Last June Frederic E. Bryant, actor and director in many productions, filed a divorce action against his wife, naming Mr. Davis. Miss Power did not contest the suit. Miss Blood in her complaint names many instances where her husband and Miss Power were guilty of indiscretions. She asks for absolute divorce and alimony.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 17.—Prospects of large world shipments gave the wheat market today a leaning to the bear side. Opening prices were 1-8 to 3-8@1-2c lower, but later transactions carried prices slightly above the top figures which ruled at the outset. Lack of feeding demand weakened corn. The market opened 1-8 to 1-4c off and receded a little further, but then hardened on account of short covering. Traders in oats guided themselves by the action of other grain. Initial sales of provisions which started from a shade to 7 1-2c up, were followed by a more decided advance. The wheat close was easy, 1-8@1-4 to 3-8c net decline. The corn close was steady, 1-8@1-4 to 1-4@3-8c above last night.
